“Dot was the best mother-in-law a person could ask for. Even after Steve and I divorced she told me “You divorced Steve not me,” and she meant it. She offered me a home when I didn’t have one. She and Wally found me a job when I didn’t have one and they even encouraged me to get back out in the dating world when I was perfectly happy spending every evening watching Law & Order with her. The best thing Steve and I ever did was to give Mack and Dot the opportunity to be true grandparents to Jessica. She has so many fond memories of playing in the kitchen cabinets with every phone in the house in there with her; or coming by to take her for ice cream; asking her to spend the night and if she cried after we left, they would beat us back home because Dot would not be the cause of her ever crying. There are so many other stories I could write about, but my favorite memories are how she always made you feel like family. I hope you knew how much we loved you.

Ms. Dot, what a treasure! We were privileged to be neighbors over 40 years. She wouldn't let us do for her without finding some way to show her gratitude. Truly one of a kind.
