“ It is the little things that will be missed the most. I don't think I have ever had a conversation about or to that didn't have "my Aunt Norma and Uncle J.E." names in the same sentence. The love you had for one another was like an old red dirt road. At times, winding, sometimes rough, however, just like the red dirt, always there and where you least expect. It can never be washed away. Later in his life I had a few phone conversation, mostly about where is Aunt Norma? He would always say lookin' after someone or running the streets taking care of him. As long as she was by his side, he was happy. His conversations were short and to the point. He never used any more words than than was necessary to get his point across. I remember when we lost our Mom, he kinda patted my back and said she was a good woman, and out the door he went. That has always stuck with me and means the world. Uncle J.E you will leave a hole in this world and will be missed. Knowing you, you have been hunting every day you have been gone, and like the last time we spoke you said " Waiting on Norma to come home" My thoughts and prayers are with my Aunt Norma, and my cousins Val, Jeff, Ashley, Russ, Amanda and the rest of the family. May you find Peace in God's loving embrace. We love and miss Y'all

“ I’m so sorry for the Edwards family. I first met JE twenty plus years ago through a friendship with his youngest son, Russell. JE was an avid horseman and outdoorsman. He was at home in the woods, no matter what he was hunting, planting or riding. He was cut from a cloth that sadly, they rarely use anymore. JE would have been perfectly suited in a real life version of your favorite western movie. He loved one woman his entire life, Mrs. Norma. Together they raised a wonderful family of hardworking, faith having people. In recent years JE has had some health issues but he kept on being JE. He had a powerful voice and always spoke with purpose. You always knew what he was thinking. I’m proud to have known him. I’m sad he is gone. I do find some comfort in thinking JE has probably run beagles all over Heaven today with his brothers his dad and his good friend, Lanny Sears. He is young and has all his vigor again. So from the Fleming family to the Edwards family, you have our prayers and deepest sympathies.

For JE I’ll listen for the beagles and when Reds’ in gait he’ll keep his head up and his ears perked up purty just like you said he should Legend...
